COMMERCIAL SOCIETY HOLD LAST MEETING

Meeting Will Be Followed By Supper.

GENERAL DISCUSSION.

Sir Arthur Currie Will Be Guest of Honor.

On Tuesday, March the 15th, the Commercial Society will hold the last meeting of a business character, to be followed later on by a wind-up supper, dinner or banquet, whichever way you feel about it.

The meeting next Tuesday will be of a form unfamiliar to the First year, perhaps, but a meeting nevertheless of great importance to them. In a course of such rapid growth as Commerce, it is unavoidable that a few deficiencies should creep in. It is to talk over the course that this general discussion meeting is called. Anyone will be perfectly free to put forth his views and open discussion will be in order.

Last year a similar meeting was held in the Union, and the committee appointed for the purpose carefully went over the suggestions submitted to them, arranged them in order and presented them to the Faculty. By reason of this co-operation of Students and Professoriate an improved course ensued for the coming year. Come prepared then, gentlemen, with any facts worthy of being discussed regarding the course, and rest assured that they will reach the proper source before next session.

Another matter of importance to be dealt with is the election of officers for the ensuing year. This is the mode of nomination and election. The honorary president is the head of the School of Commerce, the president is elected from the incoming third year, the vice-president from the incoming second year, and the secretary from the incoming third year. The publicity manager is appointed by the new executive and the representatives of the first year are elected by the new class in the fall. If you want a certain man in office, do a little canvassing among your fellows before Tuesday night.

Full details of the last meeting will be given out at the Tuesday meeting and if possible tickets will be put on sale. The supper will take place in the Union and a real dinner the banquet will be too! Come to the Tuesday meeting with $1.25—and buy a ticket. There will be music and everything. Make this meeting a fitting wind-up for a successful season's activity and come and join together to make it go.

Keeping the important news to the last, we may now announce that Sir Arthur Currie will be the speaker and guest of honor at that meeting. Much though the Commercial Society regrets that he was unable to be present at the last meeting they are glad that he is to be present at this the last and best meeting of the season 1920-21. The exact date of the dinner will be found in a future edition of the "Daily," so watch for it.

MEDICAL SOCIETY MET LAST NIGHT

Amendment to Constitution Brought Up For Discussion—Dr. Gordon Spoke.

The Medical Undergraduate Society met last night in the assembly hall of the New Medical Building. The most important item of business concerned an amendment to the constitution of the society, which was moved by Mr. Coler. Formerly the chairman of the reading room committee was chosen from the fifth year, but under the new amendment the position in future will be held by a fourth year man.

Mr. Cooder reported for the dinner committee, and had the pleasure of showing a credit balance on his accounts.

The address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Gordon, of the Montreal General Hospital, on the subject of "Epidemic Eucephalitis." In a most interesting and instructive way he outlined four cases which he himself had treated, giving a detailed account of their histories and symptoms. He showed how it was possible to have a great variety of many of the symptoms, but that manifestations of drowsiness are almost invariably present. Details of the pathology of eucephalitis were then touched upon, using as his reference British and French medical journals, which devoted many pages to this subject during the epidemic in London and in the Saar Valley.

Finally, the question of treatment was dealt with, after which a hearty vote of thanks was tendered by Mr. Learoyd.

The address was greatly appreciated by all who were fortunate enough to be present, and it is to be hoped that not many months may pass before the society will again be honored by the presence of Dr. Gordon.

At the next regular meeting (March 21st) important business concerning amendments to the constitution will be discussed, and the speaker of the evening is to be Prof. Geo. E. Armstrong, who will lecture on the subject of "Physiological Surgery."

PROF. SMITH LECTURED ON IMMIGRATION

Interesting Address on Important Subject.

SPOKE TO WESLEYANS.

Russian Question Was Included in Lecture.

Last evening, after an informal dinner, Prof. Smith, of 'Varsity, gave a splendid illustrated lecture on assimilating the would-be Canadians in Western Canada. After dealing briefly with the Oriental—especially the Japanese—problem in British Columbia, the lecturer turned to the more fascinating story of the Ukeraine, or Little Russian, Colony north-east of Edmonton, containing 60,000 unassimilated Rultunians, i.e., Ukerainians. These people have been there for as much as twenty years. A generation has grown up without any civilizing forces or education. The Dominion Government in its anxiety to fill up their vacant western plains "dumped these people on the prairies" to fish for themselves. The result is a foreign people in a great country with great potentialities and poverised circumstances. There are only a few schools and fewer teachers to bring up these children into Canadian ideals. The old folks cannot be changed, but their children are bright and clever—all they need is help and training. The appeal was made for teachers, preachers, doctors and cash to aid in the assimilation of these people drawn to Canada by visions of home unmaterialized.

There are 2¼ millions of foreign people in Canada to assimilate — a process as yet unattempted very largely except by the churches. The Presbyterians and Methodists have fine schools and hospitals at a few centres to try to relieve their great ignorance and distress. These are few and far apart. The need is for enlightened and progressive government schools and hospitals, but these are not forthcoming. Hence the church, as a pioneer in such work, is called upon to break the sod in this great and useful task. No better agency can be thought of to first touch the impressionable young life of these young people thirsty for knowledge and eager to become a real citizen in their adopted country.

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS.

Rev. Mr. McKay, of Neemuch, India, will address the Student Volunteers to-night in Room A, Strathcona Hall, at 7 p.m.

A cordial invitation is extended to all students to come to this meeting which will be one of the last to be held this session.

All welcome. 7 p.m.

EFFORTS MADE TO COMPILE SONG BOOK

Organization Meeting Held Yesterday.

MANY SUGGESTIONS.

Committee Now Appointed To Proceed With Plans.

After a certain amount of preliminary publicity, the McGill Song Book has at last been definitely launched. At an organization meeting held in the reading room of the Union last evening, representatives from R.V.C. and men interested in the publication of such a book took initial steps to guarantee the issue of a revised college song book to appear at the beginning of next term, in time for the Centennial Celebration.

While nothing definite has yet been arranged, it is hoped that the Song Book Committee will be able to get in touch with the Centennial Committee to work with them as much as possible, because the production of the book at such a time would really be, in a way, part of the programme of next fall's activities.

Prof. H. E. Reilly, of the Department of Physics, was present at the meeting, and is keenly interested in the project. He brought to light the fact that efforts leading toward a Song Book have been put forth in past years, a skeleton compilation having already been made, and abortive attempts to secure publication having been launched. He very kindly put the information and material he has secured at the disposal of the meeting.

The question of a Glee Club was also referred to. There seems to exist the feeling that such an organization can and must be started at McGill immediately. The committee is not yet sure that it will be able to undertake the recreation of that one-time flourishing body this spring, but in view of the fact that the demand for it is so insistent, there is no doubt it will soon be an accomplished fact.

An interesting scheme for the federation of all the existing and projected musical bodies at the University was brought forward and discussed. The idea of having a musical director who would oversee and to a certain extent direct the Student Orchestra, the Mandolin Club, the Rooters' Band, possibly the Rooters' Club, and the Glee Club, when it is formed, seemed to meet with general approval.

A committee was named to look after preliminary arrangements and to call a general meeting in the very near future at which a report will be made as to progress. After this meeting, a permanent committee will be appointed to issue the Song Book. The temporary committee consists of Prof. H. E. Reilly, Miss D. Aylen, H. Wyatt Johnson, J. Bieler and T. L. Bullock. At the meeting at which the committee's report will be submitted, it is requested that the heads of existing musical organizations, in-

HISTORIANS MEET ON WEDNESDAY

Final Meeting of Year Will Take Place in Strathcona Hall.

The final meeting of the Historical Club will be held to-morrow evening in Strathcona Hall. It has been found impossible to arrange for an open meeting as has been customary at the end of the season, and all business will be closed at to-morrow's meeting. As the election of officers will take place, it is important that all members should be present.

The subject for discussion will be "The United States and Mexico." Papers will be read by Messrs. G. C. Wadsworth and A. O. Leslie. Mr. Wadsworth will deal with "Relations in the Past," and Mr. Leslie will speak on "Present Relations." This subject has been a cause of controversy for many years past, and relations at the present day show little improvement. The details of the situation will be set forth to-morrow night, and the question fully dealt with in the discussion following the papers.

Once more, let us emphasize the necessity of a full attendance at this final meeting.

CRITICISM OF COLLEGE MEN

It is no infreqent thing nowadays to hear the remark made by journalists, "College men—yes, they're all very well in theory, but in practice they don't work out." There is, we believe, a certain amount of reason for this statement, although it is greatly over-stressed by those who have never enjoyed the benefits of a College education. It cannot be denied that looking strictly to the academic side of things at a university there is not a great deal of influence exerted in the direction of enabling a man to hold his own in the business world. Indeed, no college claims to do this—the faculty, quite rightly, would regard it as entirely outside their province.

Nevertheless the average student must realize that the chances of his being able to go through life without in some way meeting with situations that call for powers of organization and executive ability are few indeed. On this side of the water, at least, the men are not numerous who are privileged to live their lives in an academic atmosphere untroubled by business cares. Where is the necessary acquaintance with the methods employed to be acquired?

The answer, we think, lies in part in the fact that there are many college activities which demand a good deal of acumen on the part of those charged with them. No one could make such a ridiculous overstatement as to claim that "captains of industry" will be developed at a seat of learning; but none the less to think that the student must of necessity stand aloof from the busy life of his contemporaries is an almost equally grave error.

It is then of the highest importance that men should early in their courses get in touch with the big activities about college and get an elementary training that may stand them in good stead later on.

"WINSOME WINNER."

The following review recently appeared in "The Mississipian":

"Ha, ha," the villain cried, in accents harsh and wild,
"I'll get you yet, me proud and haughty child!"—

So winsome Winnie buffeted by the "crool" hand of Fate and thrown on the hard, hard world, is pursued through twenty pages of print. Hold tho, gentle reader, she is rescued in the nick of time by our handsome hero, who proves to be a "Dook," and she discovers in the last few pages of a very thrilling story, that ner birth was not what she thought is was. To quote the simple and demure girl's own brilliant words:

"Oh, Sir, I thought all the time that you had an upper birth and I a lower."—

It all ends happily—of course. The bewhiskered villain is foiled. (As all perfectly good romances of the year 1875 should end.)

"Winsome Winnie" is the first story in the volume, "Winsome Winnie and Other New Nonsense Novels," by Stephen Leacock. There are six included in this book. They are all delightfully amusing, very clever burlesque of the usual types of short stories. Your favorite is here, be it a sea, detective, love, or adventure story.

Especially worthy of comment is "John and I, or How I Nearly Lost My Husband." It is done in the fashion of the best Heart and Home magazine. There is not as much joyous nonsense in this story as the others. The humor of it is quieter, which has its own appeal. There is also a Civil War story which struck us as being particularly good. "The Blue and the Gray" is the title of the story, and the author declares this title was selected because of its originality!

Mr. Leacock has acquired a style of writing for this particular type of story which is almost irresistible. To burlesque a story may be easy, but to do it well is a more difficult matter. There is evidently a certain art and knack to it. Mr. Leacock has discovered it.

The humor in the book is "easy," and to use a slang expression, it is rather a happy-go-lucky sort of humor. There are a few places in the book where Mr. Leacock carries his humor a little too far, but these places are so infrequent that they are not detrimental to the book as a whole.

To us this present volume of stories is the best thing the author has done since the first volume of Nonsense Novels. Several of the stories in this book have appeared only recently in the Century Magazine, and one of the present group was printed in Judge.

There are some people in the world who might read this book and take it seriously—We wonder?

B. F. W., Jr.

cluding the Rooters' Club, be present. If anything in the nature of a musical unit is to be inaugurated, it might be well to have their advice and approval. Certainly nothing would be done towards such an end without their entire sympathy and co-operation. The present committee has been empowered to look after the matter of the Song Book only; anything else brought up was in the nature of suggestions.

AN ISSUE FULL OF INTEREST.

The quarterly reviews of current events the world over constitute one of the features of the Journal of the Canadian Bankers' Association which make that periodical one of more than ordinary interest to the business man who is at all concerned in interpreting matters of political and social significance in the light of the effects they are likely to have on industry, commerce and finance. There are fourteen pages of this review and editorial comment in the current number of the journal, touching on the outstanding features of the contemporary situation both at home and abroad.

In addition there are six special articles of general business interest, as well as a like number of special articles and reports of peculiar technical and educational interest to the banker.

Arthur W. Kiddy, financial editor of the "Morning Post," London, under the heading "War's Aftermath—Banking on its Trial," discusses the grave and complex situation now facing the bankers of the world, which, he demonstrates, are much more critical now than during the war. George W. Edwards, of Columbia University, takes up a study of "Foreign Acceptances and the New York Discount Market," in which he describes the process followed in certain hypothetical cases, and the alternative methods of financing foreign purchases of American goods. William Lang, Liverpool, England, recites the rather romantic history of the foundation and development of Coutts's Bank, with reminiscences concerning the early members of that famous family. Henry A. Stimson, D.D., New York, describes the unusual educational undertakings of the National City Bank of New York on behalf of its employees. Maberly Phillips, F.S.A., takes the reader back to the days about a century ago when the major portion of the token money of Great Britain was issued by the Bank of England and when panics were really panics, taxing the strength of even such institutions as the Bank of England. W. C. Clark, Queen's University, tells of the almost uncanny fidelity with which the Harvard Review of Economic Statistics was able to predict and trace the movement almost a year in advance of the present business and price depression. Of special interest to bankers are such contributions as the terms of the D. R. Wilkie Scholarship, a report of the Toronto Bankers' Educational Association, the minutes of the general meeting of the C. B. A., and the various departments of the journal.

(ii) There shall be as many Fellowships as the income of the endowment available for the purpose will for the time being in the opinion of the trustee suffice to pay, so that initially there be three Fellowships, but nothing herein contained shall impose on the trustees an obligation to fill any Fellowship.

2. The tenure of a Fellowship shall be for one year, which may be extended by the trustees for a further period not exceeding one year. The trustees may in their discretion for what they consider grave cause suspend for such time as they shall think fit or remove any Fellow from his Fellowship.

(iv) Any candidate for a Fellowship who shall directly or indirectly canvass any of the trustees or any member of the advisory board shall be disqualified for election to a Fellowship.

Applications must be accompanied by the names of not more than three references, one of which shall be the name of the Head or some Professor, Lecturer, Dean or Tutor of the University or College, or of any College of the University at which the candidate took his or her degree or passed such an examination, or obtained such Diploma or Associateship as is referred to in Regulation 3 (i) above. No testimonial must be sent or will be received. Candidates must also state whether their private means would enable them to carry on the required research work for two years without the aid of a Fellowship.

(ii) Applications of candidates which are duly received will be considered after (a) full enquiry from Professors or other persons under whom the candidates have studied, (b) perusal of their published papers (if any), and (c) full consideration of their relative merits with a view to decide which of such candidates are of marked promise and are likely to become researchers above the average, and in considering such relative merits regard will be had to (a) the personal record of the candidates, (b) the importance of the research work proposed by them, and (c) the research work upon which other Fellows are engaged or which other candidates propose to carry on.

R. V. C. NOTES

HOCKEY.

It has been found impossible to get the Victoria Rink on Tuesday, at 7 o'clock, therefore the game between Third and Fourth years will have to be postponed until Thursday, March 10th, at 7 p.m. It is hoped that a goodly number of rooters will turn out to support the girls. Remember the day and the hour—Thursday, at 7 p.m., in the Victoria Rink. Admission, twenty-five cents.

DELTA SIGMA SOCIETY.

On Wednesday afternoon the Delta Sigma Society will hold the public speaking contest. This contest counts for a point towards the banner; and there are also two silver cups awarded. The subjects are chosen by the speakers and are therefore always very varied. This contest is well worth hearing. So keep Wednesday afternoon free and come to the meeting.

UNDERGRADUATE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the R. V. C. Undergraduate Society was held at noon on Monday, chiefly for the purpose of nominating the officers for the coming year of 1921-22. Friday, March 11th, is election day, and the ballot will take place in the Common Room from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. Two scrutineers from each year were elected to conduct this voting. All R. V. C. Undergraduates are urged to take a keen interest in this election and not neglect to vote.

The following nominations were received:

For President — Miss Winnifred Birkett and Miss Mary Fry.

For Vice-President — Miss Dorothy Teed and Miss Lorna Kerr.

For Secretary-Treasurer — Miss Phyllis Murray and Miss Katherine Dawson.

"WEATHER FORCASTS" IN BUSINESS.

A system by which the future of business is foretold with greater accuracy and for much longer periods in advance than are the vagaries of the weather by meteorological experts, is described in the Journal of the Canadian Bankers' Association by W. C. Clark, of Queen's University.

"In these days when manufacturing operations have to be initiated months ahead of demand and on mere estimates of demand," he says, "mistakes in judgment on the part of business and financial men may prove disastrous." He proceeds to take up several methods which have been tried out for the scientific foretelling of events, and points out the weaknesses of each. Of one, however, he has no criticism, terming it "the most important of all, because most scientific, most elaborate and least subject to the influences that might weigh with a profit-making organization."

This is the Harvard Review of Economic Statistics, a scientific price forecaster, of which we are told that "an index constructed on this basis for the years 1904-14 very accurately forecasted all the major movements of industry from eight to twelve months in advance of their occurrence," and further, that "the current index, set up in November, 1918, appears to have correctly forecasted wholesale commodity price movements and general business activity since the armistice, in spite of the unsettled conditions which have prevailed."

The committee in charge of this work reports: "From the movement of our index we were able to forecast the rise of commodity prices which began in the spring of 1919 and continued until April, 1920. In December, 1919, the decline of Curve 'A' and the sharp rise of Curve 'C' enabled us to forecast the recession of prices and business activity which began in April, 1920. Our Index is apparently running 100 per cent. true to pre-war form, and barring such eventualities as another world war, we expect to be able to forecast, by some five to ten months, the movement of commodity prices and business activity."

"I vish I vas as religious as Abie."

"And vy?"

"He clasps his hands so tight in prayer, he can't get them open ven der collection box comes aroundt."

BOXERS OFF FOR OTTAWA ONCE MORE

Brewer, Edelberg and Shackell Consent To Go.

ZEBE GAMBLE, LEADER.

Difficulty in Obtaining Other Men For Trip.

Due to the splendid showing they made in Ottawa several weeks ago, the boxers were asked to perform for the St. Patrick Scientific Club, who are holding an amateur "Boxing Show" in the Drill Hall on Thursday, March 17th.

Being that it is late in the season, and that the exams. are not very far away, there is great difficulty in securing the services of the boxers, who are "burning the midnight oil" at present. But in spite of that fact, our three Intercollegiate champions—Brewer, Edelberg and Shackell—in view that there are several cups being given away to the winners of their bouts, are willing to take chances, and have gladly consented to participate in these events.

"Zebe" Gamble, the well-known football player of the Senior team, who acted as manager during their previous exhibition, will again be the leader, and considering the manner in which he acted and controlled the boys then, it is evident that they will come to no harm under his personal care.

In a letter received from the mentioned Association, the following men besides the champions were asked to make the trip: Mirsky, Badger, McMeens, Chisholm and Long. It is very doubtful whether these men will want to go, but under the persuasion of our manager, who could "move a stone to tears," they may change their minds and consent.

The boys will be matched against men from Queen's and 'Varsity—thus those who beat the representatives of the mentioned Universities in the Intercollegiate Assaule-at-Arms have nothing to fear.

Further news concerning the trip will be published in the "Daily" shortly, but for the present the best that can be done is to wish the three men who are going the best of luck.

AT THE NEW GRAND.

Madge Kennedy has so often and delightfully been seen in comedy-drama that it is a surprise to find her starred in "The Highest Bidder," her latest picture, taken from a story by Maximilian Foster. "The Highest Bidder," although not without comic effect, is more or less of an out-and-out drama, and Miss Kennedy proves in it that her capabilities are by no means limited to farcical expression. The photoplay gives her a great deal of room for acting, and as a result, is one of the best of the numerously good Kennedy vehicles which have been supplied to the star. "The Highest Bidder" tells the story of a girl condemned by circumstances to marry a wealthy man for his money alone. Unfortunately, Sally falls in love with the same wealthy man, and still more unfortunately, the same man, who is in love with her, conceives the idea that she is in love not with him, but his dollars — and plenty of incidents bear out this viewpoint, so that the photoplay at the New Grand Theatre, all this week is replete with genuine clash of drama. On the same bill the inimitable Will Rogers in one of his true to life comedies is being shown in "Guile of Women." This time Will Rogers plays the part of a Swedish sailor whose trust in women gets him into a good many difficulties. As the sailor Yal, Rogers lives up to his unsurpassed reputation as a marvellous character. "Guile of Women" is the kind of picture the whole family will enjoy and remember for a long time to come. Other features make up the film part of the bill. The New Grand Orchestra, under the direction of David S. Levin, renders the musical programme.

The Tale Of A Job

BEING HINTS TO THE JOBLESS
By TRAPPER
(A Hunter of Jobs).

Part II.—CHANCES.

LOST.

Lost, a perfectly good job, between Greed Ave. and Hesitating Crescent. Finder please return to loser. J. A. S., Box 1003, "The Cootie."

Well, time is flying, and old Jimmie Smith hasn't got a job yet. The end of the college year is approaching, and man cannot live on air alone, though Jim thinks he may have to try it again. Cash goes and goes fast, it goes like — like hair without herpicide.

Grim old Despair begins to prowl around and grab our jobless one at every turn. To escape this old giant, Jim makes one big turn, buys paper, ink and some new nibs, and gets to work again.

After looking over his lists of prospects, he decides to re-apply to nearly all of them, but to do so from a different angle. To accomplish this, he adopted the tactics of writing to somebody who had not signed the reply to his first application. He found it quite easy to do this, and sent in fresh applications addressed all the way up from the charwoman who cleans the floors to the president who dirties them. By going around old Redtape you sometimes get past him, and if you do, your chances are greatly improved.

Things hung on this way for a couple of weeks until Smith felt that all hope of surveying was gone, so up goes his nose and he says, says he, "Sour grapes, now for the building trade." He applies to many large contracting firms in much the same strain as he applied to the surveyors, and the big engineering firms replied in stereotyped manner, though they did occasionally say that chances would have been better if he had applied, say, a month ago. He surely did wish he had; but as he hadn't, he made the best of it, as the worse was already made.

Now we all know that Necessity is the mother of Invention, and it wasn't long before our friend, J. A. Smith, got pretty well acquainted with that old lady, and soon afterwards he had a new idea. Now, an idea is of most use when new, so he utilized it at once, and the result was that a number of small surveying and engineering firms in small towns were the recipients of applications from Jim. This was a wise move to make for two reasons. First, these small firms are not so well known, and so have fewer applications, in fact, often none at all. As a result, they don't bother with an application file, nor do they have application forms printed, so they usually reply stating that they can or cannot give you work.

Just after Smith got these latest applications off, he was overjoyed to get an offer from one of his "file of reference" friends. The offer was fair enough in itself—$75 a month and expenses. Now Jim suffered from that common and painless complaint of swelled head. So feeling that that was very little to offer him, he wrote back a haughty note asking for $100 per. An awful jolt awaited him, for when the answer came it was a curt refusal of the raise, but a kind enough offer to let him accept the $75 offer, which would be open for one week. Here is a grand chance, but Jim felt that he might get a little better, and so dallied on and on, until he felt he must write or the week would be up. So he wrote accepting, rather more humbly, but was unpleasantly surprised to receive a short note which pointed out that he had waited over his week, and that the vacancy was already filled. That old Glan Despair had Jim by the short hairs now, and there seemed no escape, in fact, dreams of fast rivers and heavy stones floated through our hero's brain, but lack of nerve kept him out of harm's way.

On the evening of the 16th, two days after losing his first chance, Jim found a letter awaiting him on his return to his room. I would like to be able to say that he opened it with trembling fingers, etc., etc., but to say such would be rank falsehood, for the receiving at the rate of one reply per day for the last six weeks had hardened our friend to open a letter, with an engineer's card, without even a tremble of an eyelash. It was the contents which sent him gyrating about the room,—it was the offer of another job, this time with a small form, that of Trye & Winout, of Wunhoss, a small town in P.E.I. If the offer of only $75 was a blow, this was worse, for they only offered $65 a month and expenses. He has learned wisdom since losing one, and is hardly likely to risk another loss. He is disappointed. He looks again at the letter and then looks up the town. Very small town! Very small pay! Very long way off! On the other hand, he has no job. He goes to bed, and in the morning, letter in hand and problem in mind, we find him in lectures. He thinks, thinks harder than ever before at college, and finally murmurs aloud, "Half a loaf IS better than no bread." He also finds that half a lecture is as bad as none, for he is hurled forth by an infuriated Prof. who wishes to know the connection between making a silk purse out of a sow's ear and half a loaf of bread.

Freed from the agitating vicinity of Prof. Sylke, he decided to write and ask if it would be possible to get $75 per month.

Two days later, Bert Trye leans back in his chair and peruses Jim's letter. It reads:

Dear Sir,—With reference to your offer of the 14th inst., I regret to say that I consider that $65 per month is too low a salary for comfort, and I should be delighted to accept if you will raise it to $75 per month.

Thanking you in advance for an early and favorable reply.

I remain, yours truly,
(Signed) J. A. SMITH.

"Well, what do you think, Jack, shall we give him the raise? He sounds a likely youngster — H'm, twenty-six, eh; must be a returned man. I guess we can manage it."

A short three weeks later we find James Anderson Smith installed and being initiated into the job of general assistant to the firm of Trye & Winout, in the town of Wunhoss, P.E.I.

The months go on, and Jim gets to know the people, particularly some congenial young ladies, and he gets to like the town. True, there is only a movie, and no high-toned shows. There is this compensation, however, of bi-weekly dances, and, as he said in the fall, "Oh, Boy! some of those girls can dance." He makes friends of Trye & Winout, and gets to know them in an informal way, and when he leaves in the fall he finds that he is sorry to leave what he once described (before he went) as the "filest hole in earth." He is now glad to be able to have a chance of coming back next year, and hopes he gets that chance.

You may perhaps be able to see what the point is here, and then again you may not; anyway, here it is, a little sharper:

Don't hesitate too long and lose a good job.

Don't be imposed upon, but get as much pay as you are worth. Don't try for more or you'll never work for that firm again (if they can help it).

Try to get to know your employers.

THEATRES

NEW GRAND.

This week's bill at the New Grand is varied and entertaining. As a special attraction two feature films are shown. They both deal with the same topic—the love of a man for a woman—but the romantic antithesis of the two pictures makes the programme doubly interesting. They show the reverses and disappointments which rich and poor alike experience in their battles for love, and the attempts to overcome what is thought unrequited love.

The first picture, starring Madge Kennedy, is entitled "The Highest Bidder." A young man who has been left a large inheritance seeks to find a woman who will love him for himself alone and not for his money. Almost beaten in his search for true love, he at last finds the girl who he thinks cares for him and not his wealth. But he is lead to suspect her also, and in a synical mood attempts to test her. He picks out from some park derelicts one whom he thinks can pose as a lover. He instructs him to show his attentions to the girl. But subsequent events prove her true design—that she is not a wealth-seeking adventuress. After many intricate situations the true pair of lovers are reconciled, and love finds its way. It is a charming picture well portrayed.

The second picture has the love fibre in it also, but it has a humorous vein throughout. Will Rogers makes a perfect Swedish stevedore and lover. His love affairs lead him to worry and disappointment. He in America anxiously awaits his Hulda from Sweden, whom the war prevents from crossing the ocean. How "Yal" tries to forget his Hulda but cannot, and how he finally succeeds in rising from his position as a stevedore, is full of humor. His Hulda does come over, and despite the loss of his money her good fortune enables him to buy a ship which he names "Hulda," as he promised. Although unavoidably detained from his wedding he outwits his enemies and arrives on time to marry the girl he has sought and won.

It is a different picture differently told. In his characterization of the Swedish stevedore, Rogers succeeds admirably, and with the assistance of a very capable cast, the film is very pleasing.

A Pathescope News reel completes a very enjoyable programme.

GAYETY.

The performance at the Gayety this week can be termed without exaggeration as being one of the best seen during the last few weeks. The play, presented by Barney Gerard and entitled "East is Wet," is a very amusing form of comedy and due to the splendid acting of its two leading men, Messrs. Welsh and Weber, who made a great "hit" with the packed house.

Messrs. White and Ulis, with their amusing duets added much to the pleasure of the afternoon, while Harry Bolden, the "Culud Man," was applauded very loudly whenever he appeared upon the stage. As far as snappy dancing was concerned Miss Gertrude Hayes, Jr., contributed more than her share, while Miss Maude Baxter proved herself to be a very good singer.

The scenery and costumes were up to the usual standard of the Gayety, while, last but by no means least, the chorus of beauties fitted to the atmosphere of the burlesque very harmonically.

LOEW'S.

The programme at Loew's this week is one worthy of its name, and all patronizers should witness it.

The overture, "Tancredi," was ably rendered by the orchestra, and was acknowledged by a good round of applause. This was followed by a Fox News and a Sunshine Comedy.

The first act of the vaudeville programme is the "Esther Trio." It introduces graceful dancing on the part of two girls; but the feature is the hand gymnastics of a comedian, who forms the third of the trio.

This was followed by York and Maybelle. This act was full of spicy chatter, but the whole effect was lost when the act closed with a horrible rendering of a popular song.

The best act of the evening followed. This was a sketch by Jane Allyn and Co., depicting a scene between an employer and a pretty stenographer. Owing to the theft of some money by the stenographer's brother, the employer has a hold on her, because she takes the guilt to save her brother. The employer tries to seduce her, threatening her with a cell and the house of correction. She stands the test which he had so inflicted—and the boss and the stenographer then marry and live happily ever afterwards, etc.

Whereas the above act was the best, Fox and Mayo, who follow, are the other extreme, and scarcely deserve mention. The only redeeming feature is the power of one of the actors, to sing with both a woman's and man's voice.

The fifth act was the "Cabaret de Luxe." The orchestra was excellent and jazzy, and the dancers were graceful and shimmy.

The photoplay starred Billy Burke in the "Education of Elizabeth," a very interesting "comedy of errors."

ORPHEUM.

"The Eternal Magdalene," a modern morality play, was presented last evening to a full house. The play in our opinion is one of the best plays yet seen in Montreal. It treats of a vital question of the ever present vice and teaches the moral that only "those among ye who are without sin should cast the first stone."

Elijah Bradshaw, the chairman of the local town committee, who is determined to extinguish vice in his city, falls asleep while preparing his final report on the success of his achievements. He had received a letter from one of the abandoned women who are about to be driven from town cursing him that he may experience the sufferings of those whom he is persecuting. He dreams; and in his dreams the curse descends upon him. In his afflictions he is only saved by the "Eternal Magdalene" who is sent from Heaven to teach him wherein he has erred.

The play is interesting, vividly portrayed and treats of a problem which concerns us all.

A. S. Byron did some excellent acting as Elijah Bradshaw, the one-sided, narrow-minded father, who is only made to realize the smallness of his views by being placed in the same position as those whom he has maintained "must suffer misfortunes of their own making."

Grace Carlyle, as "A Woman," entered into her part with a charm and finish which is entirely deserving of praise.

William McNaughton, as the reporter, Hal Munnis as the son, Gilberta Fanet as the mother, did full justice to their parts. The rest of the cast were also well played.

In fact the play leaves an altogether pleasant impression on the audience. We could do well with more of its calibre.

DRESS BY WEIGHT

Pound of Clothes For Stone Of Weight

One pound of clothes for every stone of weight.

Sir James Cantlie presented this as a hygienic dress principle for men and women.

He was speaking at a meeting at the College of Ambulance, London, England inaugurating a physical culture section for women.

"Don't think that because your heart palpitates you have heart disease," he said.

"If going up and down stairs makes you puff, do it until you can do it without puffing."

Speaking of women's fashion ranging between the arctic, temperate and torrid zones, he warmly defended corsets.

"The absence of liver trouble in women is due," he said, "to the equable temperature in women's bodies obtained by wearing corsets."

More boys than girls died in childhood, he declared, because boys wore half the weight of clothes girls did. One and a half inches of cholera belt did for the waist what the corset did for women.

"Don't do the exercises in gymnastic clothing," was another of Sir James's points.

He urged women to do exercises not for muscular development, but to stimulate the body, and to do them in their ordinary clothing.

His final injunction was: "Don't let an impudent little monkey over in Paris dictate to you how you should dress."

Something To Work By

Everybody in the world has some sort of a basis to work on—every business organization has its clear cut policy, and in that we are like our brothers.

Our basic principle in the merchandising of young men's clothes is Quality. With quality we have linked up an honest and successful effort to retail the finished product at a fair margin of profit, which pays us well for good workmanship, but which brings the garment to the wearer at reasonable price.

When that is your basis, you don't have to hold clashing sales.

Our new spring goods and styles are on view at present. We can show you something most excellent to your order for

JOHN G. "JACK" COPELAND, B.A.
For President of the Students' Council

Born at Cornwall, Ontario, 1894. Cornwall Collegiate Institute. Entered McGill with the Class of Arts '16; vice-president of class in 1914-1915. Activities—Class football and hockey. Enlisted for service overseas with the 6th Field Ambulance in February, 1915; served two and one-half years; wounded at Courcellette in 1916; returned to Canada and was discharged as medically unfit in 1917. Resumed studies at McGill with the Class of Medicine '22. Graduated B.A. in 1918.

Activities—Class president, 1917; vice-president of Returned Meds.' Association, 1918; Medical Dinner Committee, 1918; secretary, Rugby Football Club, 1919; president of McGill Union, 1920-1921; vice-president of Students' Council, January to July, 1921.

To the Undergraduates of McGill University,—Having been strongly urged by a number of representative leaders of the various college activities to offer myself as a candidate for the presidency of the Students' Society, I present herewith my claims for your support in the coming election.

As a member of the Students' Council and as president of the McGill Union during the past year, I have been brought into close contact with practically all branches of student activities.

While it is impossible to lay down a set platform, yet, with the knowledge and experience so gained, I place before you the following salient points of the policy which I believe should be followed out next year, and which it would be my honor, if elected as your chief executive, to foster to the best of my ability.

(1) In October next, Old McGill will celebrate her One Hundredth Anniversary, and in the programme being prepared the undergraduate body is being allotted a prominent part. Since an estimate of the future of the University can only be based on conditions existing at that time, it will be my fond endeavor to make it possible for the undergraduates to fill their part in keeping with the glorious spirit engendered at McGill.

(2) Greater recognition of minor clubs and organizations, athletic and others, without infringing on the rights and privileges of major activities. I would lend my utmost support to the further promotion of Inter-Class Athletics, where the raw material is developed for the representative teams.

(3) Careful supervision of all expenditures without curtailing the funds necessary for the legitimate activities of the individual clubs.

(4) Assistance to the "McGill Daily" in keeping it upon a sound footing, financially and editorially, that it might continue to fill its useful place as the big unifying influence in undergraduate activities.

(5) Finally, if elected, it will be my endeavor to aid in the promotion and furtherance of all student activities conducted in the best interests of the University, and to generally justify the faith placed in me.

GERALD F. ALWARD, 3rd Yr. Med.
For President of the Students' Council

Born at Rathmines, County Dublin, Ireland, 1887.

Education—Black Rock College, County Dublin, Ireland; St. Many's College, Rathmines, County Dublin, Ireland; Dublin University, 1909-10; 1911-12-13, Canada, Banking.

1914-1918—War service in Canada, England, France, with 50th Canadian Infantry. Wounded, 3rd of June, 1917 (Lens).

College Activities—Class president, 1920-1921; assistant manager Senior Rugby Team, 1920.

Platform—The student body must realize that any attempt to establish a platform must be futile, as it is impossible to lay down a cut and dried policy for a position which requires an elasticity of mind to meet the varying circumstances as they present themselves.

It will be readily understood that the vital questions which arise from time to time during one's administration cannot be foreseen and solved at a time like this.

No one can foretell the issues, great and small, which are bound to arise during the coming session, and therefore it would be out of place for me, or anyone else, to offer solutions for questions of which at present we have no cognizance.

I would say this to the student body,—I am not seeking office for personal aggrandizement, but rather am desirous to place my time and my labor at the command of the studests and to co-operate with them by every means possible.

In conclusion, may I be allowed to say that I will do everything in my power to interpret the students' wishes to their best interests insofar as lies within my competence.

(Signed) GERALD F. AYLWARD.

R. L. HAMILTON
For President of the Athletic Association.

Prep. School — Bishops College School, Lennoxville; Lower Canada College, Montreal.

Activities at McGill—Track Team, 1919-20, 1920-21; Harrier Team, 1919-20, 1920-21; vice-president Track Club, 1919-20; vice-president Intercollegiate Track Executive, 1919-20; president Harrier Club, 1920-21; president Track Club, 1920-21; 2nd vice-president Can. Amateur Athletic Association (Quebec Section), 1920-21; Provincial Committee for the Promotion of Track Sports, 1920-21; captain Snowshoe Team, 1920-21; Canadian Half-mile Snowshoe Champion, 1921; captain Medical Undergraduate Team in recent campaign; Students' Council, 1920-21; Athletic Association, 1920-21; president Intercollegiate Harrier Union; 1921-22.

Overseas Service—Three and a half years in the army; thirteen months of active service in France; Ninth Field Ambulance; commissioned as Lieutenant 8th Canadian Reserve Brigade.

Platform—If elected to the office of President of the Athletic Association, I will endeavor to handle all affairs of that body to the best of my ability, without prejudice, and with profound consideration for all matters.

I will do my utmost to encourage the highest ideals of true sportsmanship and co-ordination in all lines of sport. I believe in supporting a more systematic training of athletes (such as that practised this year in Inter-Class Hockey) in all branches of sport, whereby more men will be encouraged to turn out for the various activities and gradually work their way to the senior teams. This would ensure a more abundant supply of material for the senior aggregations and would permit of men with mediocre talent training themselves for these positions.

A closer co-operation should be encouraged with our affiliated colleges. In these institutions there is at present much latent athletic talent, and this cannot be uncovered unless there is systematic co-operation between all the units of the University.

A. R. LAWRENCE (BLONDIE)
For President of the Students' Council

Born at Halifax, N.S.

Freshman, Dalhousie College, 1913-14.

War Service—1914-1919. Service in France, 24 months. Enlisted, Gunner, Canadian Siege Artillery; discharged, A.-Capt., Royal Air Force.

Activities at McGill — 1919-20, president Maritime Club; 1920-21, Class president; Chairman McGill Yearbook Board; president English Rugby Football Club; vice-president Mining Society; Junior Dance Committee; treasurer Science Undergrad.; treasurer Maritime Club.

I advocate a greater development of Inter-Faculty sports along the lines of Class Hockey this winter.

If elected, I will endeavor to serve the best interests of the student body as I see them, as I have endeavored to do in the past.

(Signed) A. R. LAWRENCE.

D. W. AMBRIDGE
For President of the Athletic Association.

Prep School—Lower Canada College.

College Activities—Senior Football Team, 1919 and 1920; president Returned Men's Association; vice-president Science '23 Football Executive.

I am strongly in favor of increasing the facilities for every form of athletic activity, thereby rendering them accessible to all members of the student body insofar as the finance situation will permit, at the same time maintaining that strict economy which present conditions so urgently require.

SILVER AGAIN APPEARING IN FRANCE

Unprecedented Rise in Its Value.

COINS STILL RARE.

Fall of Franc and No Confidence in Paper Money Caused Disappearance.

France has long been almost without silver money. The unprecedented rise in the value of silver and the fall in the value of the franc, which made the intrinsic value of the silver franc much higher than the nominal value of the same piece, were the principal causes of the almost total disappearance of silver currency.

The silver coins were hidden or they were melted and made into jewelry, or they were carried into Switzerland where they could be sold, not as French francs, but as Swiss francs, which are twice as high.

In consequence of the decline in the value in silver in these latter weeks, silver coins are beginning to reappear in France. They are still extremely rare, and probably will be for some time to come. Paper money, even for the smallest sums, is practically the only currency. But the motive for hiding or for selling French silver is now less strong.

During 50 years, from 1864 to the end of July, 1914, the French mint struck 485,000,000 francs worth of silver coins. During the war a much larger omission was made. From August, 1914, to May, 1920, at which date the issue of silver was suspended, 568,000,000 francs worth of silver was turned out. The total in circulation ought then to be 1,053,000,000 francs, from which should be subtracted about 85,000,000 francs for pieces used, lost and melted, and 180,000,000 francs of the Napoleon III. issue, which was demonetized. Therefore there are 800,000,000 francs nominally in circulation, but in reality a silver coin is as rare as a gold coin.

At London, which is the centre of the world's market for precious metals, the record price for silver was reached in February, 1920; 89½d. was charged for the ounce, although before the war the price was about 25d. In June, 1920, silver had dropped to 44d. In September it rose to 60. At present it stands at about 37.

Thus the pre-war price is being approached, but for France there still remains the problem of the rate of exchange. France has to pay double these amounts in her own money to obtain silver, and it is therefore quite unlikely that fresh silver coins will be put into circulation for some time.

In spite of the continued difficulties, these French citizens who had piled up their silver because they were afraid of paper money are beginning to have confidence again, and are tired of keeping in their possession useless money. Silver is slowly coming out of its hiding places.

The Cafeteria

There is little or no need to boost the Union Cafeteria to the Student Body as a whole — but there are still a few to whom we would make our appeal.

Catering as it does to the student and his tastes, The Cafeteria has always operated with an eye to his pocketbook as well as his inner man.

The combination of good food well cooked plus economy in price is our basis of operation.

YALE'S FUTURE SPORTS POLICY

Followers of College Athletics Are Interested Regarding Course of President.

Followers of college athletics in the eastern part of the United States are wondering just what influence the election of Dr. James Rowland Angell as president of Yale University may have on the future of Yale sports directly and all eastern college sports indirectly. The new president has for a number of years been an advocate of intercollegiate athletics on a less pronounced basis than has been practised by many of the colleges and universities of the United States and many believe that his views will hardly conform to the system which has been prevailing at Yale, Harvard, Princeton and a great majority of the eastern colleges.

At the University of Chicago, President Angell took a quite prominent part of the handling of athletics at that university as well as in the management of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic Association, which is more generally known as the Western Conference, or "Big Ten." This association takes in the big universities of the Middle West and it has, probably, the strictest eligibility rules of any intercollegiate body in the United States if not in the entire world. Many of its rules are widely different from ideas which prevail in the universities outside of that conference, and followers of athletics in many colleges not connected with the "Big Ten" are not all in accord with them.

Yale University has by tradition been strong for all kinds of intercollegiate athletics. With Harvard and Princeton she has done much to develop college games in all lines of competition, football, baseball, track and field sports, hockey, lacrosse, lawn tennis, golf, swimming, gymnastics, fencing, etc. In fact, it is doubtful if athletics have not done as much to bring Yale to the attention of the collegiate world as has any other feature of her work. Yale graduates take great pride in the work of their athletic teams and follow their success or failure years after they have left their alma mater. Yale athletic teams have become a Yale tradition, and it is difficult to think of Yale's athletic system or tradition being much changed.

Yale has already done much to raise the standard of collegiate athletic endeavor. With Prof. R. N. Corwin as chairman of the Yale Athletic Committee some few years ago, Dean LeBaron R. Briggs, chairman of the Harvard committee, and Dean Howard McClenahan, chairman of the Princeton committee, these three gentlemen, all of whom are intensely interested in college athletics of the higher type, gradually raised the standard of competition and the attitude of graduates and undergraduates towards college sport for sport rather than for victory at any price. They did not, however, show any inclination to do anything to retard the development of the athlete of the team. They never showed an inclination to take any radical step such as the abolishment of the training table or the limiting of practice seasons, as has been done for western circles. It has seemed rather to be their views that athletics should in no way conflict with or retard the principal work of a university — education; but that when conducted, they should be conducted with a view to giving the candidates the best instruction and training possible, the same as is applied to the teaching of any educational course which the universities might offer.

What President Angell may do with regard to Yale athletics is just now a matter of speculation. It is practically certain that with such pronounced views as he had at Chicago and after taking as active a part as he did in Western Conference athletic affairs, he will give considerable attention to those of Yale when he becomes perfectly familiar with his new duties. How Yale followers will receive any radical departures from their athletic traditions is also an interesting question, but judged from past experiences, it is doubtful if they will welcome any changes which will in any way tend to lessen the prestige which Eli teams have won. Should the new president come into close contact with Dean Briggs and McClenahan on collegiate athletic matters, there is no doubt but what he will find two gentlemen who are eager to do everything that can be done to put eastern college sports on the highest possible plan of competition, but without in any way tending to lower the standard of development. If intercollegiate athletics are to continue, there seems to be no real reason why the members of the teams should not have the very best coaching and training methods available. This seems to be the idea for which Harvard, Princeton and Yale have stood for during the past few years, and all three will welcome a newcomer who will offer any valuable service toward maintaining this standard.

WHY COLLEGE SPORTS?

A college graduate, a former athlete, Newton A. Fuessle, writing in "The Outlook" (New York), has these interesting remarks to make about competitive athletics. While we are far from agreeing with Mr. Fuessle's theory that we are getting too much exercise, we think his ideas may be of some interest to McGill's athletes, and to those who have the conduct of the University's athletics in their charge.

Mr. Fuessle writes, in part:—

"I have played end in high-school football and have competed on the track in all events ranging from the 220-yard dash to the two-mile run. I have run, like an imposing ass, mile after mile around a dust-infested 26-lap indoor gymnasium track until it seemed that the heart must beat itself to pieces in the weary body. I have won a cross-country race from a large field of college runners, was one of a team of five that won the Western Intercollegiate Cup at cross-country, and even used to set pace for the then world's long-distance champion, James Lightbody, for the first mile of his indoor two-mile race.

While I must admit that there was more or less exhilarating fun in signal practise, in a few rounds of boxing, and in practise runs in the open country, I have never enjoyed any phase of competitive college sports, save, perhaps, the moment of winning, All the rest was torture—physical and mental.

The pretence of college medical authorities to keep the physically unfit out of the competitive sports I regard as a joke. Men are rushed into the most violent of competition whose hearts and lungs ought to bar them. The strain undergone by the winner of a race is not to be compared with that undergone by the also-rans, outclassed from the crack of the gun, who finish only because they have the will to finish, and whose vital organs are often torn and mangled during the ordeal."

This is only a part of the article. It deals with phases of physical activity other than college sports. The point it makes throughout is that people on this continent overstress work, and understress ease. Its evident object is a mild defense of the "lounge-lizard" in moderation.
